AN EXORCIST WANTED.

All will remember the wonderfal stories with which the Fox family opened the Spiritualist campaign at Rochester, many years ago; how crockery took to itself wings and flew away; how bricks started out of the walls: how bells broke into spontaneous tintinnabulation; in fine, how the lives of the family were plagued till they could have issued a new edition of Fox's Martyrs. These stories had their day, then died, and the spirits left the breakage of China to be done in the legitimate way by the - cat.

But now, suddenly, the devil seems to have broken pose in Lafayette, near Syracuse. Mrs. J. F. Clark writes to the papers of the latter city, saying that re-markable demonstrations have lately taken place in the family of one Johnson. It appears that this family onsists of an elderly couple and their grandchild, girl of eight years growth; they are "quite respect-able" people, and cannot understand why they have been selected for these demoniacal doings.

The first thing these people noticed was ludi rously annoying; their salt dish and pepper caster were filled with water—a most unaessonable joke. Then the dishes began to break themselves, and it was impessible to lay he phenomena to the charge of the cat, for it would have required a feline regiment to do the damage that befell the luckless household; they would lift themselves from the shelves, go circling through the air, and bring up in a fragmentary condition on the floor or the do-mestic hearth. The tables next began to take exercise, making the tour of the room with the most provoking coolness; and if by chance they were loaded with dishes, they would turn over and lie down on their burden. The proprietors put a stop to this manifestation, however, by nailing the peripatetic furniture to the side of the house. But then the chairs caught the excursive mania; they would rise from the kitchen floor, and, without asking permission, go to the woodshed. It is noticeable that they never troubled themselves to come back. Pails of water next became obectionable in their habits, upsetting their contents upon the floor. Mrs. J. F. Clark says:

"At one time Mrs. Johnson set an empty pall on the floor, and on crossing the ro inst followed her; much vexed, she gave it a push, exclaiming, 'Go bark where you cane from.' It obeyed, but immediately returned to her, crossing the roun three or four times."

It will be seen by this extract the was on terms of agreeable familiarity we er domestic utensils.

was cooking insisted on spilling their contents, much to the aggravation of the family hunger, and when everything seemed to be breaking up, the perplexed housewife determined to adopt a new system. Collect-ing her meet valuable glassware into baskets, she proceeded to tie them to the wall with ropes. While attempting to do 10, a coffee-pot deliberately sallied from the supboard and struck her in the back. Naturally irritated by this cowardly act, she called the young thild, and instructed her to hold the belligerent pot down upon the floor, while she herself finished lashing the baskets to the wall; but the coffee-pot was too strong for the infant, and she was forced to let it go. The ill-tempered thing at once flew up and hit Mrs.

Johnson again, upon which the latter very properly threw it into the stove, saying, with the spite of a woman annoyed, "I'll see if I can't burn the witches

The next performance in the diabolical program ne was a fantasia by the bed. This useful article would roll its clothes into a ball, put them underneath the bedstead, then scatterite bowels of straw about the room, leaving not a spear of stuffing ioside the tick. Mrs. Johnson, who is certainly a plucky woman, sewed the bed up with stout twine; but when, flushed with anticipated victory, she turned to put away her needle, the work was ripped out in a twinkling, and the straw fell in a rustling shower about the floor.

For some time, the controlling spirits of these antics kept Sunday with old fashioned New-England propriety, and there was quiet on that day. But, about two weeks ago, Mrs. Johnson sat down and began to read her Bible aloud. Presently she heard a noisy rapping on the stove; but she had become too much accustomed to household diablerie to mind this much, and she only raised her voice the louder. Upon this the rapping became so violent that the good woman was forced to give up her devotional exercise; then a voice spoke, and said: "I will burn your Bible, I will "burn your Testament, I will break your stove in "pieces, I will break your windows, I will tear up your floor —after which incoherent and impious remarks the Bible was hustled about the room till it was pretty much torn in pieces. Subsequently two other voices joined in the gbostly task. Said one: "It is the 'spirit of this child's mother who is doing all "this." "No," said another, "it is the arris." A third remarked pleasantly, "it is one of your major

These singular performances attract crowds of ple, says Mrs. J. F. Clark in the Syracuse paper, which, together with the rainous operations going "on, seem more than human patience can bear;" and it must be asknowledged that this is a very mild way of putting the case.

It is to be remarked that the Mrs. J. F. Clark who parrates all this has not seen any of the demonstrations herself, but gains her information from a neice of the Johnsone, who claims to have had a collar and bonnet torn in pieces while paying a visit of mingled condolence and curiosity to the haunted family. It is quite probable that in this case fiction is stranger than truth.

THE KILLING OF MARSHAL ARMS IN TOPEKA .-The fact of the killing of United States Deputy Marshal Arms by John Ritchey, at Topeka, on the 20th inst., has already been made known. Some additional facts come to us by The State Record, a paper published at the place named.

John Ritchey was a prominent and fearless member of the Free-State party during the months of 1855, 1856, 1857, and on this account he had been an object of hatred to the Slave party. He was arrested in 1856 on a charge of mail robbery, said to be ridiculously improbable by those who knew him. After suffering much at the hands of his captors and jailers, he effected bis escape. On the 20th inst. Arms, the Deputy Marshal, tried to rearrest him on the same charge, and was shot by Mr. Ritchey.

The latter gave himself up, was at once tried and acquitted. From the address of his counsel we quote acquitted. From the address of his counsel we quote enough to show the line of argument:

"Mr. Dow opened the case on the part of the defense, by expressing his gratification at the honorable course pursued by Mr. Brockway, the attorney of the people, in this examination. He amounced his intention to do little more than read the law, upon which the defense would rely for an acquittal. He conceded to the Territory, what they had not proved, that Leonard Arms was a Deputy-Marshal of the United States, and had in his pocket two writs for the arrest of John Ritchey. He said no testimony had been addreed for the defense, but they were willing to take such a case—not as the Territory had made, but such as they wished to make and desired to make—and upon their own showing, John Ritchey must be discharged.

"Arms fell in the house of Ritchey, with a drawn pletol in his hand, loaded with powder and ball. Did harms fell in the house of Kitchey, with a drawn plated in his hand, loaded with powder and ball. Did he fall as an officer in the discharge of his duty, or a citizen, entering Ritchey's house feloniously? The Territory has shown that Arms asserted that he had no writ or process for Ritchey, in the presence of Rice, and therefore was witnout the protection of the law as an officer.

"But even as an officer in the discharge of his duty, he should not have entered Ritchey's house without Ritchey had first refused him admission. Leonard Arms entered unlawfully and was shot down, when R tchey had more than retreated to the wall. He read the law of homicide from the statutes of Kansas, and showed that Leonard Arms was shot while committing an assault with a deadly we spon upon the person of John Ritchey, and under our laws the latter was justified, and must be discharged."

The decision of the Judge was as follows: an officer.

The decision of the Judge was as follows:

"I have had the matter under candid consideration since the commencement of the trial, and I believe that I realize the importance of the position that I occupy, and that I have enceavored fairly to scrutinize the evidence with that candor and impartiality which the subject under consideration so justly demands, and after fully weighing the evidence with all the ability which my poor feeble pature possesses, have come to the honest conclusion, in view of my responsibility to my God, my country, and myself, that John Ritchey has committed homicide, but one justifiable in the sight of God and man. This being my honest convistion, the Court deems it to be its duty to acquit the prisoner at the bar charged with the murder of Leonard Arms, and discharge him from the custody of the law." The decision of the Judge was as follows:

HISSING IN CHURCH .- We recorded the fact, the other day, that on a recent occasion the congregation attending service in the notorious Church of St. George's in the East had hissed the preacher violently. Late London papers show that the case bad found its way into the Courts.

An elderly man, a journeyman clockmaker, was brought before a police magistrate charged with hav-ing willfully disturbed the Rev. Bryan King on Saning willfully disturbed the Rev. Bryan King on Sanday evening, April 8. The solicitor who conducted the presecution stated that the worst disturbance that ever occurred in St. George's Church took place on Sunday evening. In this case there was a conspiracy to disturb the services of the Church, though he was not prepared to prove the prisener joined in the conspiracy. He was, however, prepared to prove that a riot took place in the church, and that the prisener took part in it. He should also prove the latter made a confession of his guilt. A surgeon testified that he both saw and heard the prisener hiss, and that he afterward said he was sorry, that he had come a long distance, and that he would never do the like again—remarks open to the charge of incoherence at least. The witness did not see books flung about on this particular Sunday; but a chorister boy received a violent blow on the head, and had three fits afterward. The Rev. Bryan King, the rector, testified that as soon as he was in the reading deek something was thrown at him, striking him on the cheek. He found it to be a piece of cake or pudding. He knelt down and engaged in private prayer, when something else was hurled at him.

For the defense, Mr. Stoddard said his unfortunate client, who was a poor, uninformed man, hearing of the Trautarian innovations in the services of St.

For the defense, Mr. Stoddard said his unfortunate client, who was a poor, uninformed man, hearing of the Trastarian innovations in the services of St. George's Church, went there out of curiosity to see what was going on. The prisoner had positively declared to him in his instructions that he was not histing, but only speaking to those alongside of him. He thought, considering the fearful disturbance in St. George's Church on Sanday night, it was impossible to distinguish any single particular hissing. It was a great pity the rector and his friends did not select the ringleaders in these unhappy disturbances, so disgraceful to the country, instead of picking out a poor, miserable man like the prisoner.

Finally, the magistrat decided against the prisoner. Then came the question of what punishment should be given. Under the act of Elizabeth, the prisoner was liable to a fine of 100 marks. A mark is 13s. 6d. The Justice said he would not allow the indignation he felt at the disgraceful conduct of others to prejudice the prisoner; but he must be permitted to express a fervent hope that those disturbances would cease, and that no more provocation would be given on one side or the other. He amost despaired, however, in spite of all he could say, that he should ever hear the last of the St. George's cases. Whenever a case of a bad character was made out, a very severe fine or a length-ened imprisonment would be inflicted. He thought the justice of this case would be answered by fining the prisoner two marks, or 26s. 8d., and in detailt of payment six months' imprisonment, and no less.

The fine was collected by subscription among the people in and about the court, several boys and girls contributing, and in three minutes the prisoner was liberated. At last, when the kettles in which the family food Pugillism and Royalty.—The last Prince of Walcome aftended a fight, though he professed to have no etomach for its brutalities. His very presence, however, was warrant that the pastine was fashionable; and when the allied sovereigns and generals came over to England, after the great "furn up" on the Continent, Lord Lowther could think of no more acceptable treat to those angust personages than a breakfast at his house in Pall-Mall, followed by a series of boxing matches in his drawing-room. The picked athletes of the day "set to" in their very best style, and the Czur, with all the illustrions strangers, so appreciated the exhibition that within a day or two it was repeated in their presence, amid the loudest demonstrations of applance. The graceful and manly Jacason so delighted the spectators who, for the first time, saw all the pugilistic qualities united in one man, that Jackson—ex-cockney builder, Surry innkeeper, and protege of Col. Harvey Aston—became the hero of the day, gave lessons to Byron, was painted by artists, was be written by biographers, and pockated, as a professor of the art, an amount of guiness from noble pupils which could not have been acquired in ten times the period by any ten professors of philosophy. The last interview between Pugilism and Royalty—when they may be said to have shaken hands and parted—was st Coombe Warren, in February, 1817, when the Czar Nicholas, attended by Lord Yarmouth, witnessed the fight between Fisher and Bone. The former was the conqueror, and at the close of the fight his second, "Bill Richmond," presented him to the Czar. Nicholas took off his hat to the braised and bleeding victor, who held out a puffed hand, which the autocrat condescended to touch with acd shake between his fisgers. Since this grand presentation, pugilists have been foreign to the air of Courte. except those of the "County," Sessions," and "Assiza."—[Athensum.
